➤ Introduction:

Electoral campaigns for candidates is one of the most important phase through which the electoral process goes, and it is a right to the candidate that is regulated by the electoral law, as it aims to provide an opportunity for the candidate to introduce himself to voters and present his thoughts, attitudes and electoral program in order to gain the support of voters and then vote for him in pursuit of winning the elections.

The Electoral campaigns provide to the voters with the best and appropriate choice among the candidates. Therefore, the candidates prepare their electoral campaigns at various organizational levels according to the election's size, type and geographical scope, the candidate's potentials and the law regulating the electoral campaigns, to achieve the candidate's goals. The candidate's excessive confidence about ensuring that the voters will vote for him then he will win the elections, without launching any electoral propaganda, is wrong, as the mature voter is affected by the electoral campaigns that may change his attitudes in voting at the last moment. So, any candidate that wants to win the elections, should prepare and implement an electoral campaign early by planning, activating the communication means, benefiting from and taking advantages of the surrounding circumstances to target voters in a timely manner, as elections always carry surprises that keep candidates away from winning despite their importance and fame in society.

Candidates use various techniques to reach voters and convey their messages to them, including through traditional and social media, public events, written materials, or other means. The official timing of the election campaign is legally binding. In the 2024 presidential elections, the National Elections Authority, headed by Counselor Hazem Badawi, specified that the electoral campaign period will continue for a month, ending with the start of the electoral silence, on 8 December, which will continue until before the start of voting. Candidates establish centers through which they carry out campaign activities and operations in general.

The importance of election campaigns lies in the fact that democratic elections require that voters should be granted fair opportunities to vote freely and based on informed decision, in order to win voter support and motivate supporters to help them fill the desired office. Election campaigns are essential to achieving these goals. Moreover, the highly competitive elections also give candidates fair opportunities to present their positions to citizens and compete for their votes.

Electoral propaganda is a legal right for all candidates and should be based on a set of principles and legal foundations such as equality between candidates, allowing them to express their ideas, the neutrality of public authorities in front of all candidates, and the use of media of all kinds, including press, television, radio and the Internet... etc.

As well as the electoral campaign needs restrictions to be organized so that all candidates adhere to these restrictions, otherwise they will be subjected to the penalties imposed by the election laws and the regulations and instructions issued by the supervising authority for the elections, as this body has to monitor the candidates during the electoral campaign. Moreover, monitor the media and has the right to impose penalties and fines on them if they violate the rules set for the organization of the electoral campaign.

The activities available to the candidate expand or narrow in the electoral law according to what the legislator decides, as he is the one who restricts these activities and decides their legitimacy through his vision in a way that achieves the interests without prejudice to the candidate's right to introduce himself. In addition, the electoral campaigns are also considered one of the most important axes that require attention and organization, as leaving these campaigns unorganized or absolute without restrictions allows for violations, attacks and abuses that may not be available to stalkers to exploit opportunities in other events, especially if accompanied by a lack of Awareness, experience and novelty of the electoral experience.

The organization of electoral campaigns is an urgent need that does not contradict any of the principles of freedoms or rights, but rather it preserves freedoms, protects rights and pays for the evils that may arise from randomness, chaos and irresponsible behaviors, and the experiences of countries confirm this, and urge it. Moreover, organizing electoral campaigns by the electoral law enshrines respect for the rules of monotheistic religions, and observing order, values, customs, constants and symbols, as well as limiting the distortion of the aesthetic image of cities, villages and public streets.

In light of the above, this report reviews the decisions of the National Elections Authority related to electoral campaigns for the 2024 presidential elections. In addition, monitoring the campaigns of candidates for the 2024 presidential elections

1) Decisions of the National Elections Authority Organizing Electoral Advertising:

Within the framework of reducing electoral violations, the National Elections Authority issued a decision to form committees to monitor violations of electoral advertising controls in the presidential elections in all governorates.

The Authority specified the controls and prohibitions of electoral campaigning, which are:

- The need to abide by the provisions of the Constitution and the law, and the decisions of the National Authority in electoral campaigning.
- The prohibition of violating the sanctity of the private life of any of the candidates, threatening national unity or using religious slogans or calling for discrimination between citizens, using or threatening to use violence, providing gifts, donations, cash or in-kind assistance, or other benefits or promising to provide them, whether directly or indirectly.
- The prohibition of using buildings, installations, means of transportation owned by the State, public sector companies or the public business sector in any way.
- Preventing the use of government departments, public utilities, places of worship, schools, universities and other public and private educational institutions and the headquarters of associations and civil institutions in electoral campaigning.
- Prohibiting the spending of public money and the funds of public sector companies, the public business sector, associations and civil institutions for electoral propaganda purposes and writing by any means on the walls of government or private buildings.
- Prohibiting Holders of political office and senior management positions in the State from participating in any way in electoral campaigning, with the intention of positively or negatively influencing the outcome of the elections, or in a manner that violates the equality of opportunity among candidates.
- Specifying the mechanism of spending on advertising, provided that the maximum amount spent by each candidate on his electoral campaign is 20 million pounds, and in the case of run-off elections, the maximum spending is five million pounds. The candidate's electoral campaign shall be financed from his own funds, and the candidate may receive donations in cash or in kind from Egyptian natural persons, provided that the amount of the donation from any natural person does not exceed 2% of the maximum limit prescribed for spending in the electoral campaign.

- Prohibiting the candidate from receiving any contributions or monetary or in-kind support for the electoral campaign from any Egyptian legal person, foreign natural or legal person, or from any foreign country or entity, international organization or any entity in whose capital a foreign person contributes.

2) Resolution of United Media Services Company:

The United Media Services Company have announced that within the framework of commitment to the determinants and controls of the presidential elections, and in support and encouragement of the electoral process, the company decided to grant each presidential candidate "100 advertising minutes" equally by all means, in accordance with the principle of equal opportunities, and to encourage fair competition that benefits the country, provided that these ads are completely free of charge from the company, and that their content is in accordance with the controls and standards set by the National Elections Authority

The United Media Services Company explained that it will be broadcast at good viewing times and fairly between the candidates. This comes in support and confirmation of the citizen's right to know the information about the candidates and their various theses, and to encourage Egyptians to fight their right to choose their candidate with full freedom, without siding with anyone, and the United confirms that it is at the same distance between all candidates.

3) Monitoring the propaganda campaign of Mr. Abdel Fattah Al-Sisi

- ✓ The conference was attended by Abdel Moneim Imam, head of the Justice Party, Mohamed Anwar Sadat, head of the Reform and Development Party, some party leaders, members of the Egyptian Democratic Party, Dr. Ayman Abu Al-Ela, member of the House of Representatives, and others.
- ✓ The presidential candidate Zahran, praised President Al-Sisi's position in supporting the Palestinian case and the position of the Egyptian state towards it, and emphasizing the state's position to maintain national security.

He pointed out that his electoral program revealed that there are a set of first decisions that he will take if he wins the post of President of the Republic, including:

- Limiting the ownership of state agencies and institutions to major strategic projects, such as: the Suez Canal Authority, iron and steel, aluminum complex, electricity, water and sewage companies, and the exit of state agencies from non-strategic economic sectors.

- Reopening the way for the private sector without competition or competition from public ownership agencies and companies
- The need to schedule Egypt's debts, negotiate with creditors in the debt restructuring initiative for African countries, introduce the principle of debt-for-investment swaps, oblige the government to a strategy of reducing public debt, and prevent borrowing outside the financing of projects with a direct economic return.
- Directing all state agencies and institutions towards a national industrial, agricultural, service, social and cultural project, approving a comprehensive strategic plan for national projects to employ employment, self-sufficiency, and export, and deepening and localizing industry with an industrial strategy in which all institutions participate
- Activating the Supreme Council for Digital Transformation, digitizing government services, developing an urgent plan to complete the digitization of all services, and working to remove all obstacles to achieve this goal, while approving the principle of transparency and access to information
- Calling for an Arab summit to adopt just solutions to the Palestinian people's issue, supporting the establishment of a sovereign Palestinian state, and building regional integration by activating all Arab, regional, and international frameworks.
- Establishment of the Commission to Combat All Forms of Discrimination, which follows the House of Representatives: under the constitutional entitlement, enjoys independence, transparency, and effectiveness, and obliges all state agencies to assist the Commission and the establishment of a prosecution and a specialized court to speed up the adjudication of discrimination cases.

He emphasized the importance of the formation of a new government headed by a prominent economic and political figure with a group of political competencies and strong technocrats and granting it all the powers to develop an urgent economic rescue plan without any interference from any party. Moreover, directing the government to prepare the draft state budget and adhere to the constitutional ratios established for education, health, and scientific research, while building a healthy and educational culture to improve the citizen.

- 11 November 2023

presence of some leaders, deputies of the House of Representatives and senators, members of the justice parties, and Egyptian social-democratic parties.

- ✓ Speakers reviewed the solutions presented by candidate Zahran to address political, economic, and societal crises.
- ✓ Zahran explained that the National Day of Assiut is on 18 April, a battle built against the French in the French campaign in 1799, and Assiut has a footprint in the establishment of the modern Egyptian state, inhabited by more than 5 million citizens.

He stressed that Upper Egypt is marginalized from any development plans and sufficient to indicate this situation in Assiut governorate. This is evidence of the mismanagement of state resources and evidence of the absence of any fair development of state resources and citizens of the state.

The presidential candidate continued that one of the upscale neighborhoods in Cairo governorate takes the same amount as all of Assiut governorate in infrastructure and the renovation and replacement of the governorate's infrastructure. This is a grave injustice in the distribution of resources and justice.

- ✓ A Spokesperson of presidential candidate Zahran's campaign spoke MP Amira Saber said: “We are voicing our voices, and once we are here, this is an expression of change and the presentation of a democratic civilian alternative, Every Egyptian is saddened by what is happening in the resilient Gaza. This has had a very significant impact on our psyche and our ability to react in reality. Egypt deserves to be in the best place and a different place from its place today, and it does not deserve to be in this grinding economic crisis”.

She stressed that Assiut has produced great symbols in all fields, and every woman deserves to be assured of her children's future and deserves better education, real health care, and a safe future.

b. Receiving delegations and partisan, trade union, youth entities, and public figures

• 11 November 2023

c. Media Interviews

- 9 November 2023
- ✓ MP Amira Saber, spokesman for the campaign of presidential candidate Farid Zahran, during statements to the program «Masaa DMC» with the media Dina Al-Wakeel, broadcast on the screen «DMC», emphasized that the election campaign program reflects the party's vision towards offering real alternatives and serious solutions to the current living conditions.

She added that the election campaign enjoys the support of many parties of civil forces, led by the Justice Party, and the most prominent features of the program at the political, economic, and social levels. She explained that achieving the full independence of the Egyptian judiciary is at the top of the domestic policy agenda by calling for a societal dialogue on the mechanisms of legislative and administrative amendments that would ensure this.

She pointed out that the axis of the domestic policy included issuing a decision to hold elections for the Egyptian People's Councils - suspended for 10 years - while ensuring the independence of the councils and building a strong local administration aimed primarily at serving the citizen.. She added that the issue of ensuring freedom of opinion and expression is one of the top priorities of this axis, by issuing a decision to comprehensively amnesty all prisoners of conscience using the powers granted to the powers of President of the Republic, especially those who have not committed crimes or violent practices

She explained that the program at the level of the economic axis targets several points, most notably protecting competitiveness, determining the role of the state in the economy, supporting the private sector, managing the debt file, redrawing fiscal policy, improving the economic structure, and rearranging the priorities of public investments.

She said: "We see education and health as the first of any other public investments".

She added that the social axis includes some files, mainly health, education, achieving social justice, empowering civil society, and the role of supporting youth.

He explained that he searched a lot about different political experiences and approached successful experiences specifically. He noted that this culture gradually burdened him at the political level gradually, and formed experiences for him from a young age, explaining that relations brought him together with heads of state at the age of thirties.
- He said he could reform the Egyptian economy structurally within three years if he wins the presidential election, adding that reform does not mean raising prices for citizens, but must be structural and comprehensive. He explained that reforming the economy is not done by dealing with a small problem, but there is a need to work on eight elements, all of which are related to the economy. The eight elements are budget deficits, industry, internal and external trade, investment, the banking system and monetary policy, employment, services, and agriculture.
- He pointed out that the dollar is part of the problem and not the whole problem, explaining that facing this crisis requires reforms in the eight elements.
- He believed that projects to expand the agricultural area are not very feasible, as much attention must be paid to increasing the size of the crop itself. He considered that it is also necessary to expand the powers of the Central Bank without removing the government from it.

- He stressed that solutions always exist and are applicable, but Al-Faisal is on the path of the application to reach the planned results, adding: “I know Egypt's problems in detail and I have new solutions to them”.
- He continued: Inflation is one of the most important problems facing the Egyptian economy, pointing out that the Egyptian pound depreciated nearly 2 cents after its purchasing power was equivalent to the value of the gold pound.
- He emphasized: "I work to employ my foreign relations to serve my country and not for my personal interests, and I am appointed to the Senate as a result of my accumulated experience and investment in my foreign relations.
- 15 November 2023:
 - ✓ The Presidential candidate Hazem Omar, held an interview in the presidential elections program broadcast on Al-Mehwar TV:
The most prominent statements in the Interview:
 - He aims to reform localities and the commercial sector, whether internal or external, especially through control and abundance, so that public finances will be structured, and industry will be boosted.
 - He has a national project capable of building a strong economy within 3 years, which includes working in all sectors in parallel at the same time.
 - He describes himself as a balanced reformist candidate, and I am not very polarized.
 - The state confronted the Brotherhood at the security level, not intellectual, and their intellectual sit-in must be dispersed.
 - He will work to reduce the budget deficit, and there will be an exceptional tax for a specific period of 5% with legislation that it is spent only for the purpose specified for it, which is education, to build schools and equip schools and programs to raise the efficiency of the teacher.
 - Industry is one of my priorities to achieve production and increase exports. My program includes solutions for closed factories, pointing out that there are 3,000 closed factories, and there are solutions to re-work, in light of their default and non-payment. Moreover, the existence of a strategy to support new industries, by increasing incentives for production and industry.
 - His possession of the will and policy to advance the industry file and overcome some of the existing problems.
 - The old rent file is very thorny and its solutions will not satisfy everyone, and the President of the Republic cannot engage in it, because this file needs societal dialogue.

The most prominent statements in the Interview:

The economic axis in the electoral program of presidential candidate Hazem Omar received great attention and devoted a wide space to him in his electoral program.

- He explained that the economic axis aims to fully address the difficult economic challenges facing the Egyptian state at the present time due to the overlapping and prolonged global crises "Covid-19 crisis and the Russian-Ukrainian crisis", which damaged most of the world's economies, let alone Egypt, which is classified as one of the five countries most negatively affected by the Russian-Ukrainian crisis?
- Omar said that facing the economic crisis requires increasing productivity in priority economic sectors (industry, agriculture, trade, and energy). In addition, raising the economic and financial efficiency of the state in order to reduce the economic burdens of citizens, by carrying out some economic reforms aimed at reforming the state's general budget, controlling monetary and banking policies, activating the digital economy system, increasing the applications of the blue Egyptian economy, and developing entrepreneurship in Egypt.
- In the same context, he said that the Egyptian citizen is interested in the economic file, and we have goals, plan and timetable and our goals in the economic program are to increase industrial, agricultural and extractive production. Moreover, the second goal is to raise the efficiencies of resource use to reach optimal use, and the third goal is to reduce loss and waste in all sectors of the Egyptian economy.

- He pointed out that this is happening through 8 sectors in the Egyptian economy, the first is the structure of public finances, it is necessary to reduce the public budget deficit, and this requires many measures, on top of which is government austerity, and we have a timetable that does not exceed 3 years.
